

I am an Acorn . . . Connie Raether

I am an acorn because, in the words of one of my very good friends, “What I have, I want for others.” I love the Fellowship, our principles, the friendships made here, and the sense of loving community. Sermons challenge me and conversations after sermons inspire me to take what I learn into the wider world. What other faith community has such a strong, stated commitment to social justice?

The acorn society helps ensure that people will continue to enjoy all that is wonderful about our Fellowship long after I am gone. That is why the Fellowship is listed as a beneficiary in my estate plan.
